P Value Based Learning

Omar Ezzeldine

Identify which values we prioritize as educators in an Islamic School. Examine explicit and implicit activities performed by adults in the organization that represent these values. Participants will evaluate their own ideas through the feedback and suggestions of other colleagues and synthesize action plans to begin the deliberate process of inculcating values at school.

Omar Ezzeldine, Ed.D., works at the Santa Ana Unified School District as the Director of Professional Development. He earned his doctorate from UCLA in Educational Leadership and has since worked nationally and internationally to support public and private schools in their development, particularly in the area of increasing student achievement and in developing effective school leaders. He previously served as Principal at the New Horizon Irvine and Emirates National School. He also teaches at USC's Rossier School of Education, preparing teachers and principals to complete their degrees and credentials. Dr. Ezzeldine is an expert in the areas of teacher development, data-driven decision-making, and school leadership.

A Differentiation

Ghayda Al Ali

In most Arabic language classes, teachers are faced with many students who are heritage language speakers (HLL) / 2nd Language Learner. For these students, the target language is not foreign, but rather a home language whose development was interrupted by a switch to English. A typical heritage learner has grown up hearing the language and begins classroom instruction with measurable oral and aural proficiency but with few literacy skills.

This workshop is designed to help Arabic language teachers better understand the differences between 2LL and HLL learners and learn how to differentiate curriculum and instruction to address the range of skill levels present in HLL classes.

Ghayda Al Ali, Ph.D. is in Sociolinguistic and Translation: English-Arabic-English. She is Associate Teaching Professor in the Department of Arabic and Islamic Studies at Georgetown University. Her research interests lean heavily towards News Discourse Analysis of Arabic print media and its interaction with the western media. She has a strong passion to improve communications and understanding between two disparate cultures of the Arab and the Western. She is the winner of the 2017 CIBER Business Language Research and Teaching grants and has several published works.

C So You Want to Hold a Science Night, But How?

Nishat Alikhan

Science Night is an incredibly fun way to engage students and families in hands-on science activities. If you've always wanted to put on a Science Night, the idea seemed really interesting but you didn't know how, then this workshop is for you! This workshop will give teachers and administrators a better understanding of how to put on a successful and engaging Science Night at their school site and will include a step-by-step approach.

Nishat Alikhan earned a BS in Microbiology from California State University – Los Angeles. She then went on to earn a Masters in Clinical Microbiology from The University of Nottingham in UK. Nishat is a member of the National Science Teachers' Association, the California Science Teachers' Association, and the California Math Council. ### L Teaching and Internalizing Values: Taking it to the Next Level

P Necva Ozgur

Helping our students to practice values is as important as teaching them writing, reading and arithmetic. The values we teach our children are their best protection from the challenges of life and influences of peer pressure.

In this session we will explore why students know the values we teach them, are able to give you related Qur'anic verses and examples from Hadith and Sirah, but are not always practicing those values in their daily lives. In this interactive session we will be analyzing together these questions and give educators research-based tools to help students internalize values and develop life-long habits.

Necva Ozgur is the founder and Executive Director of MERIT and founding School Head of New Horizon School Pasadena (NHSP). Necva obtained an M.S. degree from the School of Pharmacy at the University of Istanbul and later, an M.Ed. degree in Human Development from Pacific Oaks College, where she wrote her thesis on Strategies to Achieve Excellence in an Islamic School. After serving NHSP as principal & leading the school to earn Blue Ribbon recognition, she established MERIT, Muslim Educators' Resource, Information and Training Center. Necva provides consultation to Islamic schools on board training, principal coaching, accreditation, school establishment and evaluation. Necva serves on the CISNA board and is board chair of Bayan Claremont College. Necva served as Chair on ISNA Education Forum Committee, as a trustee of NHSP, ICSC, the California Association of Independent Schools, and the Council of Spiritual and Ethical Education. Necva also chaired a committee to develop Islamic school standards for joint accreditation with AdvancED.

I Teaching Islamic History & Its Importance to Global Citizenship Values

Susan Douglass

Islamic history is often taught in Muslim educational settings as if it were a self-contained civilization. Beginning with the stories of the prophets taught as spiritual biographies, students seldom gain a sense of these figures as living in the world of human history. To the contrary, sacred history is about the unfolding of humanity in light of revelation to specific times and places. Teaching about this sacred and worldly history after the rise of Islam must convey understanding of the global context of Islamic history. Islamic civilization was not just influential upon Europeans, but played a global role as a society open to influences and contributions, & radiating out influences and contributions in a larger hemispheric and later global space. Instructional strategies for teaching Islamic history will be discussed & resources provided for this important endeavor that will equip students to understand and be able to transmit their understanding to others.

Susan Douglass, Ph.D. is currently the Education Outreach Coordinator with Center for Contemporary Arab Studies. She received her Ph.D. in world history at George Mason University in 2016 and has an M.A. in Arab Studies from Georgetown University and a B.A. in History from the University of Rochester. Dr. Douglass has developed the education outreach program for the Alwaleed bin Talal Center for Muslim-Christian Understanding at Georgetown University in 2007, served as Senior Researcher for the United Nations Alliance of Civilizations, and managed several grant projects for the Ali Vurak Ak Center for Global Islamic Studies at George Mason University. She has contributed to curriculum projects, designed, developed online teaching resources, and had several publications.

P

Abdullah bin Hamid Ali

It is well known among Muslim Americans that Zaytuna College is the first accredited Muslim liberal arts college. However, few understand what Zaytuna actually does. What are the liberal arts? What relationship do they have to Islam? Is Zaytuna a seminary? What do students do after graduating? This workshop answers such questions by outlining Zaytuna's history as a college, its educational philosophy, & vision for its graduates. The workshop will inform educators of the kind of education that is ideal for students wishing to enter the college.

Abdullah bin Hamid Ali, Ph.D., is the Founding Director of the Lamppost Education Initiative. He serves as an assistant professor of Islamic law and Prophetic Tradition at Zaytuna College in Berkeley, California. He holds a Ph.D. in Cultural and Historical Studies in Religion & an M.A. in Ethics and Social Theory from the Graduate Theological Union. He obtained his B.A. (ijaza 'ulya) in Islamic Law (Shariah) from the prestigious Al-Qarawiyyin University of Fes, Morocco in 2001. He also served as full time Islamic chaplain at the State Correctional Institute of Chester, PA. His research interests include the interconnection between law and identity formation, comparative Islamic law, and Islam's role in the modern world.

A Promote Learning with Mindful Repetition without Being Repetitive

Lina Kholaki and Nacheda Tizani

Bored learners aren't learners at all. So, how do you repeat without being repetitive? Using the same words and activities everyday makes students feel bored/uninterested in the language class. We should be asking ourselves, how do we keep repeating without being repetitive? Participants will be able to learn several tips on how to keep students engaged in the same content even through several repetitions.

Lina Kholaki has her master's degree in education from Pacific Oaks College, is certified as an ACTFL-OPI and WPT tester, and has been in the teaching field for the past 20+ years. She was appointed as a language consultant and coordinator for Arabic Teachers at New Horizon campuses, She has taught college level Arabic Language Courses at Cal State San Bernardino and University of Southern California. Currently she serves as consultant and instructional coach for LAUSD-Dual Immersion program at Elizabeth Learning Center in Los Angeles, California. Lina is the co-developer of "Hayya Natakalam Maan." Lina serves as president of National Arabic Teacher Association (NATA K12), co-chair Southern California QFI Teacher Council "SCALTC", and is a recipient of ACTFL Veteran Teacher of the Year Award- San Diego, CA.

Nacheda Tizani studied 2 years of computer science in Tripoli University, Lebanon, & is currently continuing her education in the field of teaching. She has been working in New Horizon School for the past 15 years, teaching Arabic as a foreign language in the elementary and middle school. Currently, she is teaching kindergarten & beginning Arabic to grades five through eight. Additionally, she worked on designing the assessment booklet of "Hayya Natakallam Maan" for preschool, pre-k, and kindergarten and formatting pictures for "Lughati Al-Islamiyya". In the past five years, she has been a presenter in national conferences including ACTFL, ISNA, CAIS, NCOLCTL, NECTFL & the Muslim Conference. In addition to participating in ISNA this year, she is also presenting in CLTA.

C The A in STEAM

Fawzia Mai Tung

Islamic schools tend to be good at STEM. But when an A was added to the acronym, many schools either shied away from it or limited it to crafts and Islamic calligraphy. Here is a tested method of how to build a successful art curriculum and implement it in your school, regardless of its developmental stage. You may even get away from hiring a specialized art teacher and only utilize your current staff.

Fawzia Mai Tung worked for 33 years as a tutor, homeschooling mom, teacher, principal, charter school holder, private school founder, and educational consultant presently serving on the boards of ISLA and CISE. She is also an amateur artist, her work having been accepted at various exhibitions. Her art students have won numerous awards. Some of her students have gone on to major and launch careers in art and design related fields.

Rukayat Yakub

An English word that expresses the essence of Rahma is grace. How do we bring grace into the classroom? Courtesy is one word we can use to describe Adab. In this presentation, learn practical ways that a teacher can imbibe their classroom with Grace and Courtesy so it becomes a lived reality and naturally develops through each day and throughout the school year. A three-prong approach involves the development of the teacher, direct lessons, & stories that set the tone for the classroom.

Rukayat Yakub is an education activist based in New Jersey. Rukayat loves history and education, & establishing Light Legacy Books in 2017 enabled her to bring these two loves together. Rukayat is an AMI trained Montessori teacher and has worked in education and research for two decades.

Taking Advantage of Internet and Media to Benefit Sunday Schools

Today, thanks to the internet, teachers have access to a wide array of resources & supplemental material to prepare for their multidisciplinary classrooms. These range from websites specifically designed for teachers and AFL learners, to sites that contain a combination of authentic & specially designed materials for teaching Arabic as a foreign language. This session will update you on these tools for improving your classes.

Jana Samar Dalati currently works as a master teacher in the Aldeen STARTALK summer program in Pasadena, Los Angeles & also teaches Arabic to grade school students at the Islamic Center of Southern California (ICSC), where she was formerly head of the Foreign Language Department. She is also a lesson developer for Bahrain's International School Services. Her accomplishments include developing Alarbito Zadi, a program for teaching Arabic as a Foreign Language in Sunday Schools in 2000, and co-developing the Loughti Allslamiah professional book series in 1994 for teaching Arabic as a foreign language. Samar has also served as an elementary & middle school Arabic teacher at the New Horizon School Pasadena and as a teacher and Language Club Coordinator for the Pasadena School District. Samar began her career as an Arabic Language Art & Literature professor at Damascus University, where she earned a B.A. in the field of Arabic Language and Arts. She went on to obtain a M.A. in the field of education and was further credentialed in the field of psychology.

The Utilization of a Flipped Learning Strategy for Arabic and Islamic Studies Teachers

For the weekend Islamic School teacher, time is limited, & it can be very difficult to introduce all the material for a thorough learning of the Arabic Language or Islamic Studies. Teachers can use the Flipped Learning Strategy that will allow students to access lessons during the week, so students come to the classroom prepared whereby precious time in the weekend classroom can now be devoted to honing skills, asking pertinent questions, and creating a student-centered environment that will benefit both teachers and students alike.

C Islamic Approach to Mental Health

P Sheikh Yassir Fazaga

In the Muslim community there is a tendency to avoid talking about mental health and mental health related issues due to many misconceptions and myths. We are seeing an increase of mental health issues in our communities, & schools need to know how to work with and refer to professionals when necessary. In this presentation we will address some of these, as it is especially important when some are misinformed about “Islamically-based” ideas.

Yassir Fazaga is originally from Eritrea in North East Africa. He holds a BA degree in Islamic & Arabic Sciences from Imam Saud University, the Virginia USA branch. Sheikh Yassir holds a master’s degree in Marriage and Family Therapy from the California State University at Long Beach, & is currently pursuing a second masters in Middle Eastern Studies at the University of Texas Austin. He also finished his certification requirement to become a certified sex educator and therapist. He was the director of the mental health department at Access California Family Services. He is the president and Founder of Tanweer Institute, an institute dedicated to enlighten in the fields of psychology, sexology, parenting and relationships. Sheikh Yassir’s expertise is in psychotherapy. He lectures on mental health, Islam & psychology, Islam and sexuality.

L Principles of Governance and Leadership

Mussarut Jabeen

Current research identifies the importance of how and why private/independent school boards should work closely with the school leadership and all other stakeholders. There’s an urgent need for school boards to know and understand their roles and responsibilities to educate themselves in order to improve the school culture and student learning. Research findings demonstrate the need for school governance to set short-term and long-term goals for overall school improvement by collaborating with all stakeholders.

I Improving Islamic Studies Classes: Focusing on Excellence, Relevance and Delivery

Shaza Khan

Islamic Studies is arguably the most important course offered in an Islamic school, for it is here that students receive explicit instruction on the fundamentals of their faith, from core beliefs to obligatory worship. Yet, students often feel disengaged and unmotivated in these courses. In this session, we focus on three specific areas to improve our ability to teach in a more engaging manner: Excellence, Relevance and Delivery.

C Hands-On Books-Closed: How to Be the Best Teacher You Can Be!

Tatiana Coloso

Have you ever found yourself losing the spark you once had for teaching? If your answer is yes, then this workshop is just what you need to rejuvenate your love for teaching. Statistics show that eight percent of teachers leave every year from teaching in the classroom. In this workshop, we will explore the status and reward of a teacher through the sunnah of the Prophet Mohammed (sa), discuss practical skills that will help you cope with the stress of teaching, and as always provide you with hands-on and technology-based activities to keep your students engaged in learning. With these valuable approaches to the classroom, you will not only leave ready to go back and teach, but your students will leave the classroom happy and excited about learning.

L AADAPT: School-wide Discipline and Character Building for Muslim Schools

Sabura Rashad

Behavior management is a critical issue for every school. There are various disciplinary strategies and theories, but few integrate the character and conduct that we aspire to develop in our Muslim youth. Muslim schools need to implement programs that reinforce Quran and Sunnah while incorporating the most effective research-based strategies for positive behavior interventions and supports (PBIS). What follows is an Islamic PBIS program (AADAPT) presented in an easily adoptable format.

Sabura Rashad has more than 20 years of experience as an educator, trainer, and administrator specializing in school development and improvement. She has designed and facilitated workshops on behavior management, data analysis and assessment, instructional strategies, technology and STEM integration, and response to intervention (RtI). Drawing from her wealth of experiences as an instructor and administrator, she has worked with Muslim schools, charter schools, and with home-school programs to achieve their goals for growth and excellence. She believes that a positive outlook and thorough research are important factors to the development of effective educational facilities. This motivates her to constantly learn, create, and disseminate relevant and innovative methods of instruction and administration.

I Raising Socially Aware Students

Maisa Youssef

Islamic Schools have the perception that they are raising students in “a bubble”. However, Islamic Schools can educate and train students to have a strong Islamic identity while also being socially aware. From “Black Lives Matter” to the refugee crisis, students can learn about other cultures, races, and religions through current political events throughout the nation & world. Students will learn about diversity and acceptance while strengthening their knowledge of their own religion and identity.

Maisa Youssef is going on her 6th year as principal of Orange Crescent School. She earned her bachelor’s in Information Systems from Cal State-Northridge and her master’s in Public Policy with a concentration in Nonprofit Management from UCLA. Ms. Youssef taught math for 5 years at a charter high school, where she established the AP Calculus program. She completed her second Masters in Educational Leadership and Policy Studies with an Administrative Credential.
